Springboks Suffer Another Injury Ahead of Autumn Internationals

South Africa’s head coach, Rassie Erasmus, has been hit with another injury concern after naming his Springboks squad on Monday for the Autumn Internationals Series. In a fitness update ahead of their trip to Johannesburg this weekend to play the Lions, Ulster disclosed that No.8 Juarno Augustus is a worry and will be examined during this week’s training after hurting his arm in his side’s win.

The uncapped South African was included among the ten players on standby for the Springboks’ forthcoming tour, in which they will face Japan, France, Italy, Ireland, and Wales. However, he only got 40 minutes in the victory at Kings Park and was seen post-match with his arm iced and in a sling.

Although he is not in the full squad, this will be a cruel setback for the 27-year-old, who has made an impressive beginning to life in Belfast after transferring to Northampton Saints during the summer. The 119 kg back-row was dominant against the Bulls in round three, scoring a try in his first start for the club, and may consider himself unlucky not to have been included in Erasmus’ main squad.

Second-row RG Snyman has already emerged as another concern following the weekend’s action, having picked up a hip injury early in the second half of Munster’s demolition of Leinster. Ulster, meanwhile, will hope Augustus can recover from the injury this week in their attempt to maintain their unbeaten start to the season at Ellis Park.

Ireland Gear Up for Crucial Autumn Internationals 2025 in Chicago

The club will also be without their Ireland Autumn Internationals, Iain Henderson, Jacob Stockdale, Nick Timoney, and Stuart McCloskey, and also lost flanker Sean Reffell to a shoulder injury in Durban. Beirne was on media duty earlier this week as the Ireland squad convened ahead of a crucial month of international rugby.

The Munster captain covered several topics in his press briefing, including The Rematch in Chicago. Beirne also discussed the significance of Munster’s victory over Leinster and the changing of the guard in the Irish squad with the absence of Peter O’Mahony, Conor Murray, and Cian Healy, and the chance for younger players to make a claim.

Ireland begin their November with a clash against New Zealand in Chicago on 1 November before hosting Japan, Australia, and South Africa in Dublin, and appear likely to be without lock McCarthy. The Leinster second-row suffered a foot issue while in Australia with the Lions, and has since had surgery. He joins full-back Hugo Keenan on the sidelines, but younger brother Paddy McCarthy is an uncapped inclusion.

Farrell resumes the helm of the national team, having missed the Six Nations and summer tour due to his duties as Lions head coach, with Simon Easterby and Paul O’Connell each placed in temporary charge during his absence. His return comes just in time for the Autumn Internationals 2025, a series that carries major significance for Ireland’s campaign.

Ireland Vs South Africa: Ireland Set for Tough Autumn Test Run

I’m thrilled to reveal the final Ireland squad for the four highly anticipated fixtures taking place this November, Farrell declared with confidence. The group has a vibrant, refreshed feel, and it presents a valuable opportunity not only for our seasoned campaigners but also for those who recently earned their first international caps during the Summer Tour to Georgia and Portugal.

We’ve blended experience with youthful energy, creating healthy competition for every position on the field, which is exactly what we want heading into a demanding series. This year’s Autumn Nations Series is shaping up to be an exceptional challenge, he continued. We’ll face four world-class southern hemisphere sides, each coming off an intense run of games and determined to close their season on a high.

It’s a real test of consistency, composure, and adaptability for our players as we measure ourselves against some of the best teams in the game during the Autumn Internationals 2025. Our preparation has been sharp, and the atmosphere in camp remains incredibly positive as the squad focuses on delivering strong performances throughout the series.

I have no doubt our passionate global supporters will once again turn out in huge numbers to back the team, creating a special atmosphere in one of the world’s most iconic rugby venues. Looking ahead, the upcoming Ireland vs South Africa clash is expected to be one of the standout fixtures of the Autumn Internationals 2025, drawing global attention as two powerhouse nations prepare to face off.
